Merchants and Mechanics Bank of this city. The letter of the London agent is as follows:

Liverroot, Jan. 16, 1867.

Dear Sir: In re Thompson, absconding debtor. We have to congratulate you at last, on success! We have overtaken Thompson, and got from him one of the bonds for $1,000, and in dollar notes $1,400, making $2,480, which pays your client's debt, and $52 toward the expenses—the check being for $2,423.

Thompson has proved himself a clerer person, but he has been overmatched. He was, after immense difficulty, traced to London. There he gave out that he was gone to France, and the Police, who were after him for other "cases," thereupon abandoned the pursuit. But after the greatest diligence and skill, the cab-driver was found who took him from his hotel, and he was traced not to France, but back northward in England; porters, station masters, guards, and attachés of railways hunted out and examined: Thompson tracked to Chester; there he was in private lodgings several days, and at last he was traced to Holyhead, where he was ready to have gone over into Ireland, or back to London, and to the continent of Europe; was found out, encountered, at once charged with the robbery, his own printed description, and his own check for $2,428 shown to him, and the power of attorney and decuments, also. And to come to the point, he saw the case was clear, and his detection complete, and he ripped open the stitching of the inner breast pocket of his coat, and delivered up a bond for $1,000, and dollar notes for $1,480, and his check was returned to him.

The pursuit has been most admirably conducted, and has been most ardnous.

The expenses are heavy, very heavy; but it is better to have expenses to pay after success, than the same expenses without success—thereby adding to the original loss.

Of the $2,480 received from Thompson, the set result here was $1,350.

Of the $2,480 received from Thompson, the set result here was $1,950.
